

Innovations in Special Education Awards

Sponsored by the New Jersey School Boards Association and ASAH...
Serving the Private Special Education Community Since 1974

As part of Special Education Week 2016 in New Jersey, NJSBA and ASAH want the citizens of New Jersey to know how their schools are preparing special education children for the future. If you have a successful, innovative program that has been in place for at least one school year (beginning, during or before September 2014), please tell us about it.

In assessing entries, judges will consider the following components of each program:

- Content, including degree of innovation
- How well it addresses student needs
- Its integration into the curriculum
- Evaluation strategies
- Parent/community involvement

Presentation of the entry counts. The judges will consider the written description of the program and its goals in making their decision.

Each entry must include a typewritten description of the program, no longer than two pages. The description must:

- Clearly describe why the program is innovative (e.g., introduces a new idea, method or device that is unique or novel)
- Provide a concise goal statement indicating who is responsible for the program, when it began and how it is funded
- Indicate the student population and the age group served

Entries may include printed supplemental material, such as brochures, photographs, flyers, letters and announcements. (CDs, DVDs and internet presentations are not accepted. Entries will not be returned.)

A select number of programs will be recognized at a special event to be held in May in the Princeton area in conjunction with Special Education Week in New Jersey, May 8-14, 2016. Award recipients will also be featured in NJSBA's School Leader and ASAH's publications.
